

I am an owner of two Subway stores. My first store had security cameras that constantly were going out. I found some independent company that turned out to be two men starting out. They were almost never available for help when I called them. It was very frustrating not to be able to keep a watchful eye. I could only pray I had good and honest employees. When I bought my second store, I had heard through Subway about DTT. I had them install cameras and loved them from day one.

The tech support always, always resolves any problem I may have. The installer was super and didn't leave until I understood everything. And because I know nothing about computers and all that technology, I know that they will help me. Two days ago I put DTT at my first location and they are even better! The resolution is so sharp!

I opted for SmartAudit because I need 48 hours in my day and I don't have time to constantly be watching. Before, it took me almost two days to play back video of an employee I suspected of stealing. With SmartAudit I don't have to sit there myself, because my time is very valuable.

My second installer was great, very personable and knew exactly what he was doing. I felt so comfortable that I left him doing what he had to do, came back next morning and was smiling from ear to ear. Thanks DTT!
